About the Property

Welcome home. Not the version of that phrase that gets printed on a doormat, the real one. The kind where the porch light is already on. Where the front door opens and the noise from the kitchen tells you dinner is close. Where the backyard is full of kids who have been in that pool since ten in the morning and have no intention of getting out. This house has been that place for a very long time, and it is ready to be it again. Two kids came here small and grew all the way up inside these walls. The pencil marks climbed the doorframe a little higher every birthday. First days of school got photographed on these front porch steps. A kid who could barely see over the counter eventually became the one making dinner on it. Every stage of growing up happened here, in order, in this house. Th ...
